

Pythagorean Theorem.

There is a special relation between the sides of a right triangle called the Pythagorean Theorem. It states that if you square side a and add it to the square of side b that it will equal the square of side c . Side c is the longest or equal to the other side

If we know 2 of the sides of a right triangle we can calculate the length of the 3rd side by using the formula.

